MIDYEAR DISCUSSION TRAINING

GE VERNOVA

MIDYEAR PROCESS OVERVIEW

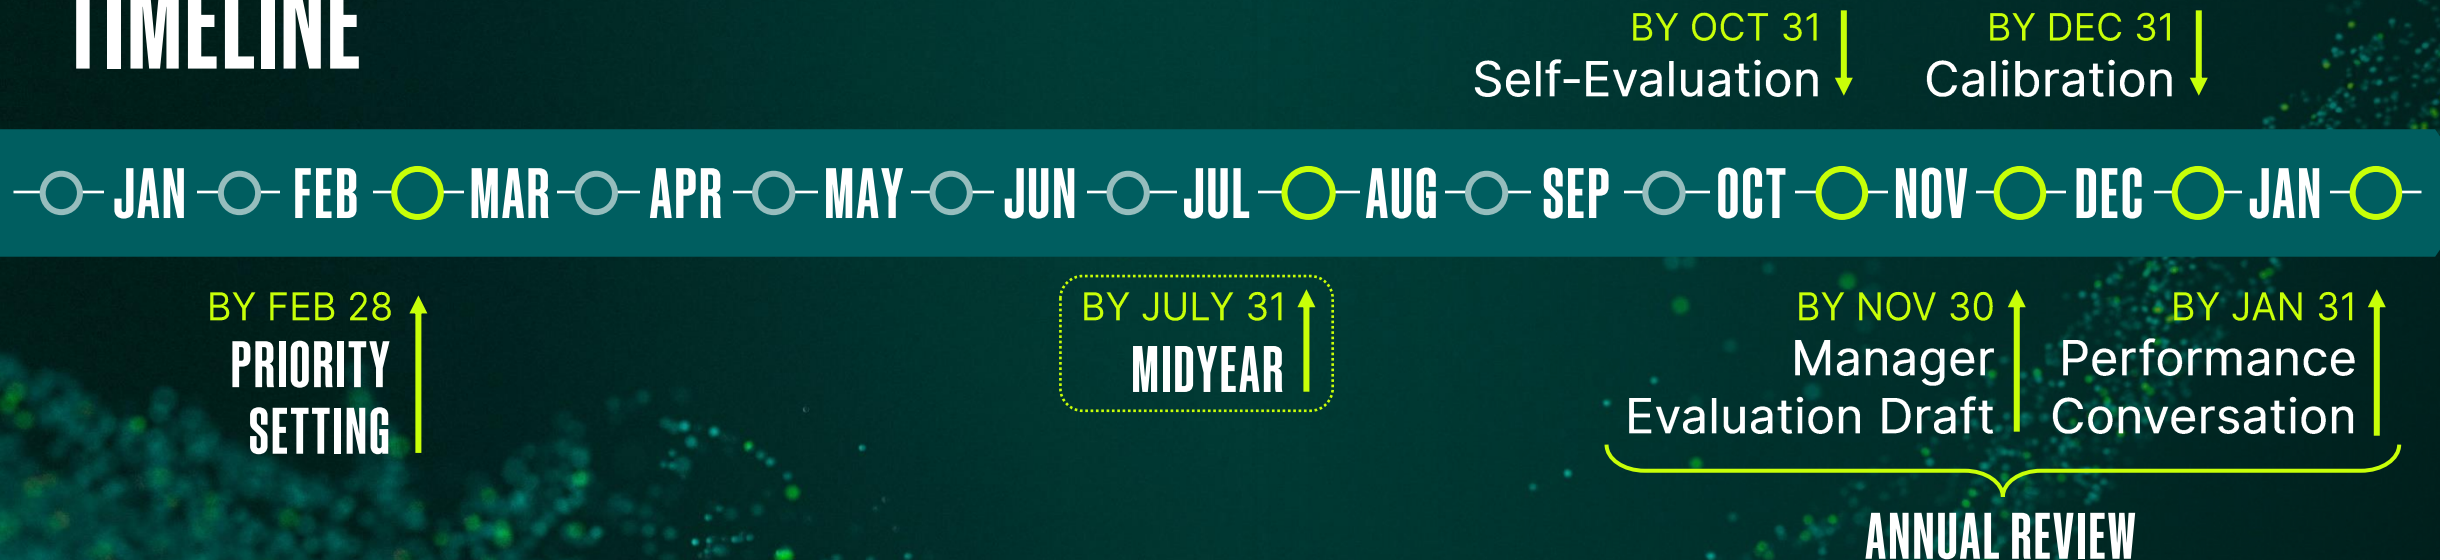

PERFORMANCE @ GE VERNOVA

PROCESS

- 1 Priority Setting: employees set 3-5 robust Priorities for the year that reflect the most critical areas of work – these Priorities can be iterative throughout the year.
- 2 Midyear: employees and People Leaders discuss progress against Priorities, any changes needed, and actions needed for a successful second half of the year.
- 3 Annual Review: employees and People Leaders end of year evaluation to discuss full-year performance against Priorities and demonstration of the GE Vernova Way.

TIMELINE

WHAT IS THE MIDYEAR DISCUSSION?

An opportunity to:

- Review progress against current priorities.
- Calibrate on priorities – ensure current priorities are still relevant and make changes as needed.
- Discuss how the GE Vernova way is or is not being demonstrated in day-to-day work.
- Align on actions needed to successfully complete the second half of the year.

Note: While employees can use the time to discuss career and growth aspirations if time permits, career conversations should be separate and can occur any time of the year.

What this looks like:

- Employees will assign each priority a status of “on track, not on track, or completed” with the option to add commentary on overall progress.
- Employees will identify at least one GE Vernova Way principle that is a strength, and one that is an opportunity.
- People Leaders will comment on overall priority progress and GE Vernova Way strengths and opportunities.
- A live discussion where both walk away with a clear view of how performance is tracking to date, any changes needed to priorities, and an action plan for any priorities and/or GE Vernova Way principles that require course correction.

GE VERNOVA

MIDYEAR BEST PRACTICES

How to Approach the Midyear Discussion

Use the below questions to help review the first half of the year

QUESTIONS

THE WHAT: PRIORITIES

REVIEW EACH PRIORITY* TO DETERMINE IF IT IS:

On Track → What data and supporting details can you provide? What actions are planned to drive completion of this priority by year end?

Not on Track → Are you producing outcomes that are below the priority's target? Have you missed on significantly impactful deliverable(s)?

Completed → Which priorities have been achieved? Was the desired outcome achieved?

*Consider if any of your priorities are no longer relevant and should be removed from this Midyear Discussion. Additionally, determine if new priorities are missing and need to be added.

THE HOW: GE Vernova Way

REFLECT ON THE PRINCIPLES AND IDENTIFY:

Strength(s): Which principle(s) align well with your current work style and behaviors? How can this continue to be leveraged to drive positive impact?

Opportunity(ies): Which principle(s) feel unfamiliar or don't come naturally? How can you strengthen it?

Note, an opportunity does not mean the principle has not been appropriately demonstrated.

Midyear Discussion Self-Evaluation – Priorities

On Track and Not on Track Midyear Discussion Examples

CHECKLIST

Reviewing Priority progress

Progress to date: Use objective, measurable data and feedback to articulate key progress (on track) or countermeasures (off track).

Plan for the rest of the year: Consider current progress trends to help forecast; indicate any planned actions and expected results.

PRIORITY

Reduce supplier costs by 45% from [Product Name] baseline

ON TRACK

“Reviewed and identified costs associated with raw material needs in Q1; currently revisiting supplier contracts to identify opportunities for consolidation and cost savings.”

“... believe we can consolidate several contracts and switch suppliers for certain materials to achieve 45% cost reduction by early Q4.”

NOT ON TRACK

“Behind schedule, still need to review and identify costs associated with raw material needs and then review current supplier contracts.”

“Need additional support from Sourcing to review contracts and identify opportunities. Complete this by August 31, could see cost reduction before year end.”

Midyear Discussion Self-Evaluation – GE Vernova Way

Strength and Opportunity Midyear Discussion Examples

CHECKLIST

What makes a good writeup?

Demonstration: Provides relevant example(s) of how the principle has been shown (strength) or how the principle could be better practiced (opportunity).

Way forward: Identifies how to leverage strength to continue to have impact on the organization (strength) or countermeasures and focus areas to help strengthen this principle (opportunity).

ACCOUNTABILITY

STRENGTH

OPPORTUNITY

“For instance, during a recent cross-functional project, I facilitated discussions that led to a more effective decision-making process.”

“For example ... I issued a request to mfg. to change their process ... Unfortunately, since I didn't talk to them beforehand, nor did I go out to the floor, ... Had I done this, we could have avoided ... having to do rework.”

“... continue ensuring that all perspectives are considered which will result in stronger outcomes.”

“Recognize the need to partner more with product service engineers to understand how my recommendation impacts the end customer”

Midyear Discussion – The Conversation

Guiding Principles

- Be Objective: Leverage data and feedback to determine progress on performance. Avoid inferences and judgments. Having detailed priorities removes ambiguity.
 - Be Specific: Include evidence and actionable feedback with specific details on situations, what was observed, the impact of that observation, and next steps to consider.
 - Acknowledge and Recognize: Celebrate the wins and look back on lessons learned. Highlight any recognition received for specific achievements or initiatives.
 - No Surprises: The Midyear Discussion is an early indicator of performance. It's important that you leave the conversations with a clear view of how performance is tracking to date.
- Demonstrate Professionalism and Psychological Safety: Create a safe space for open conversation and dialogue. Be mature, professional, and sensitive where needed.
 - Actively Listen: Genuinely listen to each other and let them know you hear them. Ask clarifying questions where needed.
 - Create Linkages: Performance is an ongoing conversation. Create linkages to previous discussions (Annual Review, Priority Setting, other 1 to 1s or development conversations).
 - Not One and Done: Commit to continuously checking in and providing and receiving feedback on an ongoing basis.
 - Course Correct: When performance is off track, use this time to work on an action plan for getting back on track.

Remember, the Midyear Discussion is a performance conversation.

Check in on career and growth aspirations if time permits, but career conversations should be separate and can occur any time of the year as needed.

TURNING AROUND PERFORMANCE

Turning Around PERFORMANCE

How to approach
when things are
NOT ON TRACK

Need help delivering feedback?
Use the Clear & Kind Framework

1 Identify what is not on track:

- Understand priorities and progress against them.
- Reflect on demonstration of the GE Vernova Way principles thus far in the year.
- Review Midyear Discussion inputs.
- People Leaders of People Leaders – hold your teams and leaders accountable. Ensure employees with off-track performance have action plans and support needed.

2 Discuss and document an action plan:

- Determine what specific actions, additional support, and/or resources are needed to get back on track.
- Ensure everyone is on the same page about what's not on track before concluding the discussion.
- A written action plan is critical coming out of the discussion. Create the plan together and include it in the Workday Midyear Discussion – either in the comments or as an attachment and follow up with an email.

3 Monitor:

- Check in and provide feedback on an ongoing basis.
- Cover progress of action plans during one-on-one meetings or schedule separate time for these check-ins.
- Ensure communication is clear and feedback is actionable.

Example “Not on Track” Action Plan

CHECKLIST

What should be included?

Course Corrections: Specific steps needed to get back on track.

Due Dates: Deadlines for each of the aforementioned steps.

Resources: Identification of additional resources that may be needed.

SCENARIO:

Employee has two priorities that require an action plan. One priority is to reduce defects by 40%, but has not made any progress, and therefore is not on track to complete by year end. The other priority is to implement a new service feature, but delivery of important material is delayed, putting the implementation at risk for this year.

ACTION PLAN

PRIORITY 1:

Bring in another resource from XX team by mid-August, co-design quality audit by Aug 30, implement quality audit by September 15 to realize 40% reduction in defect by year end.

PRIORITY 2:

Work with Sourcing to determine price point for expedited delivery by August 30, mitigating the delay and putting us back on track to deliver by year end.

HOW CAN AMP HELP?

USE THESE PROMPTS IN AMP TO HELP SUPPORT THE MIDYEAR PROCESS

Review progress against Priorities and preparing Midyear writeup:

I am an employee preparing for my Midyear discussion, you are acting as a performance management coach. Write a self-evaluation summary I can share with my People Leader during my Midyear discussion. Here are the Priorities I set at the beginning of the year: [insert or attach Priorities]. Here is my progress to date: [insert or attach notes]. The self-evaluation summary should be honest and balanced — highlight “wins” while also acknowledging “opportunities” (and how to improve in the second half of the year). Keep it concise — the summary should not exceed 250-300 words.

Addressing an off-track Priority:

I am an employee preparing for my Midyear discussion, you are acting as a performance management coach. Draft talking points for me to use during the Midyear discussion that help me acknowledge an off-track Priority with my People Leader. For context, I have not made enough progress against one of my Priorities due to [insert reason]. The talking points should be accountable but also forward-looking and solutions-oriented — avoid sounding defensive and present a clear plan to help get the Priority back on track before the end of the year. Provide questions I can ask my People Leader to make this a constructive and collaborative conversation.

Requesting a development opportunity:

I am an employee preparing for my Midyear discussion, you are acting as a performance management coach. I want to ask my People Leader how I can get [insert type of development – stretch assignment, leadership exposure, training, bubble assignment, etc.] – guide me on how to have this discussion and the key talking points. For context, the reason I want this development opportunity is: [insert rationale – i.e. it helps address xyz skill gap or weakness; it aligns with my long-term career goals, etc.]. Guide me on how to connect this request to both my own development needs as well as the value it would bring to the business.

No prompts needed when using Coach V ... the tool is designed to guide People Leaders through the Midyear process and preparation without prompts

Leverage this section to reflect on demonstration of the GE Vernova Way principles for the first half of the year. Ideally, identify at least one principle that you consider a strength, and at least one principle you consider need to have a value for each principle. The Employee Summary Comment box is required for supporting details on the principles you selected as strengths and development opportunities.

Please note, an opportunity does not always mean the principle has not been appropriately demonstrated. In many cases, it simply means you have not had an opportunity to work on this particular principle.

The Ratings Guidance document is a helpful resource for understanding example behaviors associated with each principle. Reference the Midyear Discussion guide as you complete your self evaluation.
